LEGION MEMBERS pay tribute to Métis veterans as they place wreaths at the base of Fishing Lake's handsome new memorial statue, which was created by St. Paul sculptor Herman Poulin.

Métis veterans' memorial unveiled in Fishing Lake

By Jay Gutteridge

St. Paul Journal

Crowds gathered on a beautiful afternoon in Fishing Lake on Sept. 26 to witness the unveiling of a memorial many felt was long overdue.

The settlement officially opened its Memorial Park last week, revealing a statue at its centre dedicated to Métis veterans.

"Today, we find ourselves doing something we should have done years ago," Fishing Lake council chairman Garry Parenteau told the crowd.

"Métis are known as a forgotten people. Too often our veterans are forgotten also," he said.

The statue is of a World War II soldier and bears the following dedication:

"We dedicate this monument to our Métis veterans and to their families for their service, sacrifices, courage and strength during world conflicts.

We honour their contribution to our country and to our community. Our community wants to recognize and remember them.

Now and always."

Susan Barthel, of the settlement's strategic training initiatives and employment services departments, was one of the driving forces behind the monument and park.

"We honour not only our veterans, but celebrate the achievement of our goals," said Barthel, recognizing the work of the community.

Some of the funding for the monument came from the federal government through the Aboriginal Human Resources Development Agreement.

This five-year plan ends in March, 2004 and Tom Ghostkeeper, the director of strategic training initiatives, said renewal of the agreement is being pursued.

Several veterans were on hand including three from Métis communities.

"It is always important to pay our respects and give our attention to veterans and war dead," said St. Paul Legion veteran Mike Lotoski.

The statue's sculptor Herman Poulin also addressed the crowd, which was gathered in a large tent.

He read from the famous poem In Flanders Fields by John McCrae.

"The Fishing Lake Settlement rendered justice to what John McCrae wrote," he said.

He recounted that one woman, upon viewing the statue, said "I've seen him before."

Other guests at the event included Walter Anderson, a community elder, Audrey Poitras, president of the Métis Nation of Alberta and Karen Collins, president of Zone II of the MNA.

"Without a doubt, they were and still are our heroes," said Poitras of war veterans.

That comment certainly echoed the spirit of the event.

PUTTING PEOPLE AND RESOURCES TO WORK RESPONSIBLY

Pooling resources for the common good

Fresh thinking about fresh water is increasingly important in petroleum projects all over Alberta.

In the past 30 years the petroleum industry has become more and more committed to managing its water use. The care that individual companies are taking on their projects is adding to cleaner water for all Albertans.

NAL Resources of Calgary, for example, has been working closely with staff in the Water Quality Section of Alberta Environment since 1999. They share an interest in learning about the long-term effects, if any, of petroleum production on the Spring Creek watershed near Valleyview. The streams of this watershed are similar to freshwater sources throughout central and northern Alberta.

The Spring Creek watershed is part of a large block of land that the provincial government reserved for scientific research in 1964. By 1999, proposed changes in government funding priorities made it likely the research would have to end.

NAL Resources was interested in the same tract of land because their exploration and development work on the fringe of the reserve suggested that valuable hydrocarbons might lie within it as well. These two different views of the same land led to a joint government and corporate effort to study it further.

Now, the government and NAL jointly own and use all data from the project. They also meet annually to assess the data, talk about oilfield development plans, and co-ordinate their water quality testing efforts. As always, the emphasis remains on conducting a scientifically sound study. Detailed analysis of the data is just beginning.

According to Alberta Environment Water Quality Specialist Leigh Noton, "the agreement with NAL has enabled our data collection to continue without interruption, while NAL has been able to explore and develop the underlying oil pool. It is not often that scientists are able to do what we called 'applied water quality monitoring', or continuous examination of a working petroleum project, over a series of years. It is the support of an industrial partner that makes this possible."

Watersheds are all the land areas that drain to given bodies of water.

Incineration contributes to clean air strategy

The petroleum industry has come a long way in its handling of waste gas.

Ever since commercial quantities of natural gas were discovered in Turner Valley nearly a century ago, tall flare stacks have been a part of Alberta's skyline. Those living near the flares complained about noise, smoke and smell. Some were bothered by light 'pollution' at night. Others worried about the health effects of the stack emissions, especially from sour gas.

One important response of industry and government was the creation of tough standards for reducing flared gas through the independent Clean Air Strategic Alliance (CASA). Since 1999, when the Alberta Energy and Utilities Board adopted CASA's plan for flare reduction, there has been a 53 per cent decrease in flaring across Alberta. This far surpassed the provincial target of 25 per cent.

Concrete action like that alleviates concerns and conserves an important natural resource. But flare reduction is not the only solution. Industry, which is always seeking innovative solutions, has found another in incineration.

Questor Technology Inc. is a Calgary firm that designs and builds incinerators that are 99.99 per cent efficient at burning waste gas. Enclosed incinerators burn much hotter and are unaffected by crosswinds. That means better air quality, less damaging greenhouse gas emissions, and reduced consumption of fuel gas.

As Compton Petroleum Corporation learned in the Peace River country, incineration can also be an excellent alternative solution to landowner concerns.

When rancher Nelson Ferris learned of Compton's plans to burn sour gas, he objected strongly. But air monitoring showed him that the few emissions from the Questor incinerator were well below provincial guidelines. There was also little noise and no light.

Now Ferris says, "If I had it to do over again, I wouldn't object to Compton's application at all."

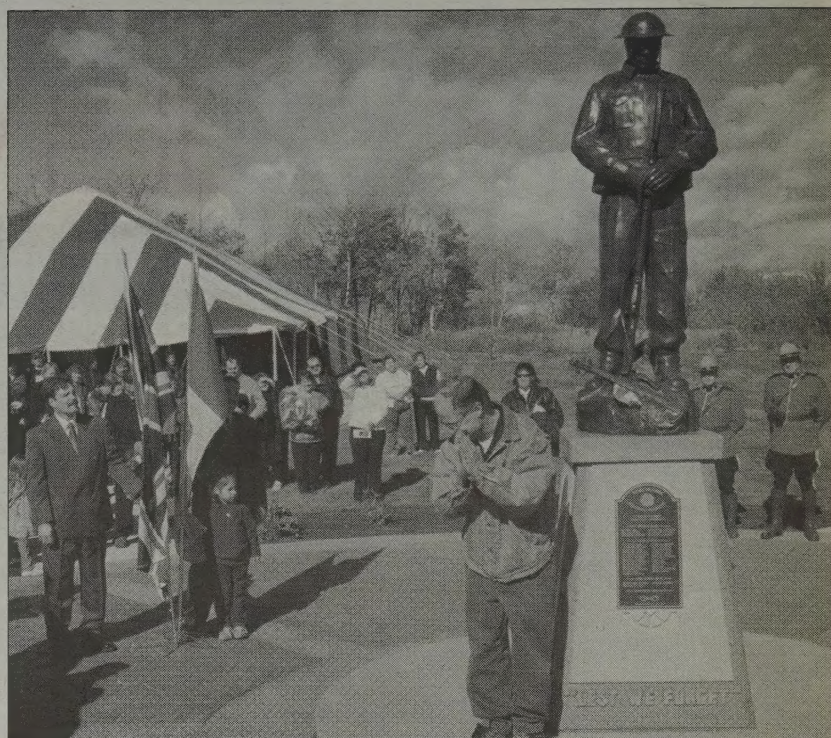

Did you know incineration:

- is an efficient, economical way to improve air quality wherever gas is flared or vented
- addresses neighbour and regulator concerns about odour, smoke, noise and light pollution
- conserves fuel gas through highly efficient combustion
- minimizes footprint and environmental impact

Hunger is still a reality in the land of plenty

Close to one in 10 people in Canada do not have enough food to eat. That's hard to believe, isn't it, since the world produces enough food to feed everyone. So, what's the problem?

A 1992 study in Edmonton found that the main cause of hunger is poverty - not waste, not laziness, not mismanagement. It is people not having enough money to buy food for themselves and their families. Yet studies done by the FAO (Food and Agricultural Organization of the United Nations) indicate that the single most effective way to reduce poverty is to reduce hunger. Poverty causes hunger, hunger causes poverty.

Hunger "undermines the peace and prosperity of nations and traps individuals in a vicious cycle of poor nutrition, ill health and diminished capacity for learning and work that is passed on from one generation to the next." Hunger not only kills people (every 3.6 seconds, someone in the world dies from hunger) but it also takes away the ability to work and learn. Hungry children have difficulty learning and attend school less. They can develop and experience behavior problems. They are more likely to be involved with the legal system or to be in high-risk situations, are more likely to get sick and develop chronic diseases later in life.

Linda FOX
Registered Dietitian

Who is at increased risk of poverty and hunger?

- Young families headed by an individual under age 25
- Unattached women
- Unattached men
- Aboriginal people
- People living with a disability

- New immigrants
- People working for low paying (or minimum wage) jobs
- The unemployed
- People on social assistance programs
- Low income people living in areas with high housing costs

When these and other situations which limit a family's ability to buy food prevail, a community experiences food insecurity. Food banks, soup kitchens, school feeding programs, community kitchens, community gardens and buying clubs have sprung up in communities throughout Canada to alleviate the situation.

The first official Canadian food bank opened in Edmonton in 1982 as a temporary stop-gap measure. There are now over 2000 food banks serving Canadians. Sadly, four out of ten food bank users are children. Food banks across the country are struggling to meet current needs.

Food banks provide emergency food, which is variable in both quantity and quality, and the choice is limited. This food aid relieves hunger but does not build food security. A community enjoys food security when all people, at all times, have access to nutritious, save, personally acceptable and culturally appropriate foods obtained through normal distribution channels (not food banks). Food security depends on:

- Having enough money to last the month
- Having the skills to get a good paying job
- Having the skills to buy and prepare food
- Having the skills to grow one's own food
- Having local, good paying jobs available.

So, how can we help? We can be active voices in terms of policies and advocacy needed to address both the economic and social conditions of poverty-stricken people. We can be involved in helping to organize community programs such as a food buying co-op, a community kitchen, a community garden. We can volunteer to teach a cooking class or help someone grow a garden. We need to work together as a community to find solutions to food insecurity in our community. We can use World Food Day, October 16, to increase awareness of the problem of hunger currently facing the world, including people living right here in this community. Remember, poverty and hunger can affect anyone.

If you, or someone you know is interested in learning about food selection and preparation on a low income, join us for an evening of fun, food and friendship on October 16 from 5 to 8 p.m. at the Elk Point United Church. To register, phone 724-3532. For more information contact Mona McGinnis, Public Health Nurse or Linda Fox, Registered Dietitian at the Elk Point Health Centre.

Thanks for sharing the warm memories

Elk Point Historical Society's Hospital Day was a real success, and it was the many participants who made it so.

It was truly heartwarming to hear the stories of camaraderie and good fellowship that the former and present hospital staff members shared as they talked about the "good old days." There was no complaining about the drudgery they must certainly have gone through to care for overloads of patients without today's equipment and technology - just recollection of how the work got done, and then there was time for fun.

Not all the stories shared were happy ones, but each brought the audience a better understanding of the excellent health care provided at the three generations of Elk Point Hospitals, and the countless individuals who worked hard to make sure everyone was taken care of to the best of their ability.

Thanks for sharing your memories, everyone. It made for a most enjoyable afternoon.

Nescience management

Have any of you ever heard the term "nescience management"? Actually, I haven't either but I thought I would put the two words together to talk about a situation I have observed in our town and other communities, and maybe I could come up with a possible management solution. In the dictionary, the definition for nescience is "lack of knowledge or awareness; ignorance". The dictionary definition for management is: "the conducting or supervising of something, (as a business); judicious use of means to accomplish an end, etc."

Anyway, where do you think I am going with this terminology? Let me explain. The Town of Elk Point has a very nice mural that is a painting of our history, that someone or some people of any age have decided to pray paint a bright orange paint over top of a part of it. The mural is not the only place where damage was done. There is also a building south of main street on Railway Avenue where the same thing has occurred. (The spray paint used this time was a different color). Over the summer I also heard of stop signs or other signs being pulled out of the ground. The examples go on and on. As people who live in our town of Elk Point, I am sure you could add to this list. Anyway, all of this is a "nescience". It brings sadness to us as these items are something of value to our community. Now we - did you notice I said we - have to find a way to erase or replace the damage done. Your thinking is that you are safe as no one saw you do this damage so you will never have to erase or replace.

To the person or persons who have committed these acts of "nescience", you must have done these activities because you have a lack of knowledge or are unaware of their value to the rest of us. Actually, I am being kind. Some people would describe your behavior as an act of disrespect through the actions of vandalism. But, because I like to believe in the value of a person, I have decided to label it an act of nescience. You really did these acts because you were ignorant as to their value to others. In other words, you didn't know or understand their value. If you understood their value, you would have chosen to let them be, or you would have become involved in helping others to improve what was there.

What about management? Is there a way our community can find a way to manage nescience? The only way a community can manage nescience is to try and "catch" the person or persons who have caused the nescience and then find ways to punish them through the law. If the person or persons are youth, then the parents will be approached. But you know what - this is not the solution. All it does is add one negative to another negative. In other words, all it does is make the person or persons more determined to commit more acts of nescience. So this is not the ideal way to manage nescience to bring it to an end.

Actually, the best management begins with the individual or individuals themselves. Most importantly, the individual or individuals need to become aware and accept that certain items are valuable to the people who live in a community. The result will be that respect is then shown toward these items. If this is a problem and the individual or individuals cannot see themselves taking this important step of becoming aware and accepting, give the FCSS office a call at 724-3800 and ask for Deanna. Let us help you take this step.

Short stories brought by the sportshound and friends

Don't you just love it! Short stories are brought to you by the short guy, the Great Gazoo.

Let's go back to 1996. The Thunder were having a good year, winning almost all their games in the Tier 1 North East League, finishing in about second or third spot, if I remember correctly. I was the team trainer that year and we always took the bus on our road games to our destination, even if they were only an hour away, sometimes less.

Dee Pankiw always lined up lots of fundraisers, (hanging Christmas lights, selling kubasa and perogies, etc.) so we would have the funds to ride in style. Since the team had money in those days, every Thursday night after practice I would take all of the boys' skates that needed sharpening over to the Skate Doctor, Don Woytkiw, because everyone knows the Doctor does the best job of sharpening skates in town. Now you may argue that he's the only guy in town to sharpen skates, but that doesn't matter, as far as I'm concerned he's the best there is. If he's good enough for me, he's good enough for the team!

One Friday afternoon I picked the skates, and put them in the back of my truck so we wouldn't have to run around at the last minute. That night we boarded the bus and headed three hours south to Consort.

When we got there the boys just started dressing for the game, when Kristin Holthe speaks up "Hey, where's the skates" All of a sudden a light come on in my head and I said "Oh, s--! , I forgot them my truck in Elk Point". Three hours away, eight pairs of skates missing, and the game starts in 40 minutes, what do we do now? Well, the manager of the Consort team went around town and scrounged up enough skates for our team so that could play the game, but all you could hear was the grumbling the whole game: "These skates

Working for YOU

in the Aspen Health Region

Here's what other health region employees are saying about why they're voting for AUPE:

I support AUPE because it's Alberta's largest union and because I expect it will deliver service in much the same way as my old union, HSAA. I want all of my union dues to remain in Alberta to work for me and my co-workers.

Heather Stocking, Chair, HSAA Barrhead Local

I'm a big believer in AUPE. I have literally called our rep at home on a Sunday night and got the help we needed. AUPE's education courses are excellent and available to everyone at no cost to the member - I recommend them to everyone in our worksite. They've given us tremendous support at our worksite in Mayerthorpe. I'm voting for AUPE.

Lynne Hansen, Housekeeping Aide, Mayerthorpe Health Care Centre

AUPE's been great since they've been our union - they've never let us down. And our union dues are lower! AUPE is an Alberta union, and it's got my support.

Further Education starts new season

Elk Point and District Further Education has started their 2002-2003 season, with the fall course guide out and registrations coming in.

The Further Education Council met last week, and Elk Point coordinator Verona Lea Flanders said the Folded Scrapbook course is going October 1, and she has had good response to upcoming courses in Painting Animals on Rocks, Books for Babies, Internet Safety and Home Alone Safely. The Daytime Quilters are back at work on Wednesdays, and two

"Quilt Till You Wilt" sessions have also been held to date.

Heinsburg coordinator Marie Zayac said interest has been shown in a first aid course and the Folded Scrapbook, and she has high hopes of receiving sufficient registrations for a Poinsettia Lamp Shade course, to be instructed by Linda Shakotko.

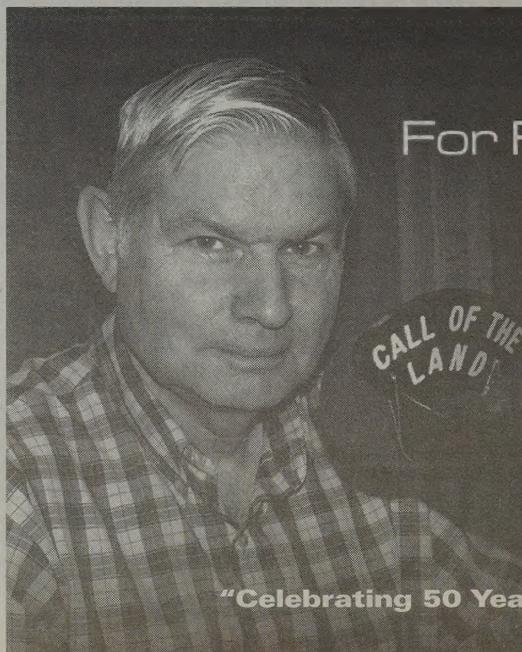

Mrs. Flanders will attend the regional further education meeting in Vermilion on October 29 where there will be a special session on rewriting policies.

Further Education has been approached with a request for partial sponsorship of a risk behavior presentation by Norbert Georget at F. G. Miller High School, which parents would be invited to attend. Further consideration will be given after cost and time frame are determined.

Upcoming courses in Elk Point include Aromatherapy on November 3, and first, second and third degree Reiki, beginning November 7. The next Garden Group session is scheduled for October 21 at 7 p.m.

community NEWS*School Board enjoys a tour of F. G. Miller High School

Today we leave behind the month of September. With a fifth of the school semester already over, most students of F.G. Miller can only look forward to all the activities yet to come. Today's release of the informative Crusader Updater (the Staff Newsletter) will aid students in planning their October schedule.

john BRAGA
F. G. Miller High

Last Wednesday's tour of F.G.M. by the St. Paul School Board seems to have occurred at a symbolically important time; as the students and staff at F.G.M. are reflecting over a month of varied achievements we are also looking forward to the many more successes we will have this year. The School Board's tour allowed us to share this sense of fulfilment and anticipation with them.

The Students Union Executive met the School Board in the Library, where a round of handshakes welcomed them to our school. Mr. Hawkins directed us into separate groups so that we could guide them on the tour. The tour was an adventure, for both the guides and guests, as we looked into the classes and administrative rooms of the school. Between inspecting the classes there was the opportunity to visit, talking about what F.G.M.'s strengths are and what we are striving to improve. In the gym one of the groups joined in the class exercises and tried the workout equipment. Also the grade sevens challenged their shyness to shake hands with our guests, and to personally welcome them to the school. Following the tour the groups re-met in the Library where conversation about F.G.M. could be carried out more comfortably, and the food platters could be sampled. The Students Union were replaced by the staff members at the conclusion of the school day so that the informal interview of life at F.G.M. could continue.

I wish to conclude by thanking the St. Paul School Board for giving us the opportunity to share F.G. Miller Jr./Sr. High School with them, and for enriching us with their presence in return.

skates suck, they're too big, or they're too small, or too dull." Needless to say we didn't win on that day, and I took a lot of flack for a long time for that one.

You know lots of times over the years we had kids show up at games missing a skate because he dumped them out in the basement to dry, but when you forget half the team's skates, that is a disaster!

And, since we're on the topic, better get your gear all checked out, make sure everything is all in order, washed, sharpened and ready to go. It won't be long now and we'll be skating, maybe even by this time next week.

The work bees are almost over for another year; next Monday should be the last one. Thanks to Jonny Neilson and the fireman who came out last week and washed the floor once again for us. Great job, guys. Also, thanks to the old reliable guys, Marshall Myshaniuk, Laverne Wilson and Geoff Bishop, and to the new guys who came out to help, Tyson Stafford, Lindsey Jenner, Brent Becker and Gary Marcenik.

And now for the K. A. Campbell's quote of the week: "We're losing at home and we're losing on the road. My failure as a coach is I can't think of anywhere else to play." Last week's answer to: "Nobody played better defense on me than Steve Kasper. When I got married I half expected to see Kasper standing at the altar in a tux" -Wayne Gretzky

Libraries help you stay healthy

In January 2002, the Alberta government accepted the recommendations of the Premier's Advisory Council on Health report and responded with an action plan to build a better public health care system. One of the key directions of the action plan is staying healthy and improving the health of Albertans. This direction relates to the recommendation that Albertans be provided "with better information about how to stay healthy".

The www.healthyalberta.com website has been developed to give Albertans access to current, evidence-based information about healthy choices and factors that affect health. Starting with a link to TAL Online in the healthy eating section, The Alberta Library has been working with Alberta Health and Wellness to raise awareness of the affordable information that supports wellness which is available in Alberta's libraries.

You may check out www.healthyalberta.com/Recipes.asp for links to cookbooks available in Alberta libraries and TAL Online.

County Council briefs

By Michelle Huley
Journal Staff

Amendment to land use

First reading was given to a bylaw which would amend the county's land use bylaw. The amendment would change the agricultural designation of NE 10-56-4-W4 to country residential.

The bylaw must be advertised and a public hearing held before it can be passed.

Lagoon investigated

Council directed its administration to investigate the feasibility of a lagoon after Councillor Allen Young brought forward a concern about changing environmental trends and laws.

"We're dumping raw sewage into farmers' fields. In my area, we don't have anywhere else. We have to seriously look at building a lagoon," Young said. "I think we need to keep this in mind at budget time."

"Maybe we should find out from (Alberta) Environment what's available and what we need."

Councillor Don Mudryk criticized the changing trend toward environmental sensitivity in agricultural land.

"Don't let a cow walk across your land just in case it went poop."
